| Tillverkning | The brandies are distilled twice in copper pot stills without the addition of sugar, aroma or foreign alcohol. During the distillation process, the first highly potent "head" that begins to flow is discarded, as is the concluding "tail" of the distillation that contains impurities. It is only the heart of the first distillation, also called "low wines" that are distilled a second time. The highly aromatic and concentrated "heart" of the second distillation is the fine brandy that is matured in small oak barrels for several years. |
